

An aerial photograph of a city street grid. A large, modern skyscraper with a curved, glass facade is the central focus. The building's interior lights are visible through the glass. The surrounding city consists of older, multi-story buildings with varied rooflines. A large red shape, resembling a stylized 'L' or a speech bubble tail, is overlaid on the left side of the image, containing the title text.

Business, International Relations and the Political Economy

Business, International Relations and the Political Economy

In today's volatile and unpredictable global order, it's increasingly important for business leaders and decision-makers to be aware of the various political, social, economic, technological, and environmental drivers of global change.

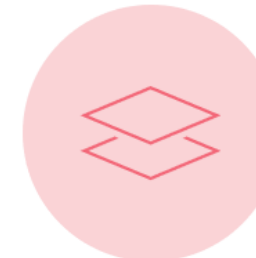

Watch our course trailer to find out more:

Explore how international relations impact global and local markets

Gain the skills needed to anticipate change and plan accordingly.

Analyse events from different perspectives to make strategic business decisions

Course Structure

Course Format

Weekly asynchronous modules, flexible learning

Duration: 8 weeks (excluding orientation)

Commitment: 7-10 hours per week

Dedicated student success advisor

Orientation module

Module 1: The evolution of globalisation

Module 2: Business, production, and investment in the global economy

Module 3: Governing the global system

Module 4: Global power shifts

Module 5: Contesting globalisation

Module 6: Conflict and instability

Module 7: Responding to disruptive forces

Module 8: Corporate responses to a changing global environment

LSE Faculty

LSE Online builds on our 125 year tradition of exploring the interconnected, multidisciplinary nature of our world that shape society and business globally. Your employees will gain access to the insights and teaching of LSE subject experts and thought leaders, equipping them with the skills to enhance their career.

37 World Leaders
(past & present) have studied or taught at LSE

18 Nobel laureates

Course Convenor

Dr Robert Falkner

Associate Professor of International Relations

Robert is one of LSE's leading experts on international political economy and the role of business in international relations. He is the LSE Academic Director for the TRIUM MBA and is the Research Director of LSE's Grantham Institute on Climate Change and the Environment.

Thank you